CALLING ALL AUDITORS

This is the second week of our worldwide survey of Auditing results and it becomes immediately apparent that our idea of pre-sessioning is not Ron's. So lets take a look at what we should do.

Ask the preclear what he understands by 'Help'. Usually he says 'to aid or assist to - well help someone to do something he wants to do, to assist something or someone towards survival'. That sounds all right - after all survival is the basic goal of all living things. So we two-way comm and get the pc's ideas and understanding of help, and then bridge into the process of two-way help. It will be an unusual pc whose needle isn't sticky, but after a time it frees up a bit and the flow has started. Bridge out into the 5 way bracket and watch your pc get really into it. Run this for as long as you think necessary and then go on to 'What problem could help be to you' or 'What problem has help been to you?' The pc may cease being factual in the first and start inventing.

Many things will happen. The pc cognites on help as an interference; on help used as a control mechanism by parents, teachers and grown-ups in general; or as a stopping of his efforts to learn by himself. He knows 'help' is something to be avoided at all costs - he doesn't trust help. In short "help" is betrayal. All right - all right you've started, get him through this, don't leave him at the make-break point. Go on with 'help', run it until the needle doesn't flicker, no matter who the terminal the pc mentions.... Auntie Josephine, his hated headmaster, little Ollie or the man next door, and then and only then is it safe to leave 'help' and go on to the next button.

The world is in need of help - people just don't do it much any more. They are not only often afraid of asking for help - they are afraid of receiving it. Yesterday I missed my bus by two minutes. The alternative to being late for work was to get a lift. Car after car completely ignored me, as I trudged along. So I stopped and asked for a ride, the same result. Ten cars sailed past - empty. The eleventh stopped. 'I'm glad you asked' he said 'People are too inhibited these days' - 'Do you think we have forgotten how to help?' 'When I see people standing waiting at bus stops I often want to stop, but I know they'd probably refuse, so I don't'.

What is the stoppage in the flow of life? We are not millions of completely separate beings sirily independent of each other, far from it. Our very thought and action affects somebody. We all live together on this planet mutually interdependent right through the dynamics, and only by helping people to realize this for themselves can we walk the road to 'clear'.

So let's have no more reports saying 'Ran pre-session for 1½ hours, all buttons flat'. 'Pre-session fulfilled in 15 minutes'. 'Two-way commed all buttons in ½ an hour'. No, do what Ron says - Run Help FLAT.
