PERPETUATING AN ORDER

Several recent instances of abuse of orders or misuse have appeared lately.

Giving an order for a given TIME does not make a perpetual order of it.

Example: "Put the box on the deck." Interpretation, "This box can't be stowed away because it was ordered to be put on the deck last year. So we always put boxes on the deck and that's why you can't walk across the deck."

An order given to fit one situation that is extended to all situations is an outpoint of magnitude and is the source of arbitrariness.

Judgement is actually the ability to reach a conclusion without entering outpoints into it.
